What is a Medical Home?
Patient-Centered Medical Home (PCMH) is an approach to primary care that leverages teamwork and technology to deliver care that is personalized, comprehensive, coordinated and more convenient for patients — the way primary care should be!

Patient-Centered Medical Home Principles
- Personal physician. Each patient has an ongoing relationship with a personal physician trained to provide first contact, continuous and comprehensive care.
- Physician-directed medical practice. The personal physician leads a team of individuals at the practice who collectively take responsibility for ongoing patient care.
- Whole-person orientation. The personal physician is responsible for providing all of the patient's health care needs or for arranging care with other qualified professionals.
- Quality and safety are hallmarks of the medical home.
- Enhanced access to care is available through open scheduling, expanded hours and other innovative options for communication between patients, their personal physician and practice staff.

What does this mean to you?
In short: Better care and better health. Studies have shown that patients in a Medical Home have fewer emergency room and hospital visits, reductions in risk factors for heart disease, and are more likely to receive appropriate therapy.
